COOPERATING WITH POLICE ON THE STREET

◆ Remember the Police Department protects us and our community. If we didn't have them to protect us, could you imagine what the world would be like? So if you are ever stopped by a police officer, just consider the fact that they are doing their job. They may be answering the call or complaint of someone else or they may be making sure that you're OK. Just remember to do the following:

- Answer all questions appropriately, calmly, and openly. Discuss frankly and without anger any questions asked of you.

- Keep your hands in clear view and maintain a non-threatening stance. Stand erect and maintain a positive attitude. Do not make any quick moves.
- Maintain a level head and show the same level of respect you would want to have given or shown to you.
- Be polite and well mannered.
- Do not tell lies. Police officers are well trained in detecting lies through your body language, facial expression, tone of voice, nervous habits, and other visual clues.

◆ The action from the officers will be affected by your approach, words, and communication skills. We all appreciate and admire a person who shows good respect. If you ever need help, just call a cop.

If you should get stopped by the police, you should remember these helpful hints. After all, you don't have to have a bad experience or altercations. Remember to abide by your set curfew!
